

Grow a Pair!

Okay, let's face it. That home-ec class you took in high school may have helped through college, but your homemade lasagna still drips and your green thumb is more often black and blue. You're no Martha Stewart. You don't look good in stripes anyway.

Spring is approaching though and it's time you learn to grow a pair of balsam... plants. (What were you thinking?)

You can grow herbs, flowers or whatever you'd like as long as you decorate your potted pretties with jewels from Bead Sprouts. A retired executive, turned Dallas stay-at-home mom invented the dangling decorations to spice up hanging plants. Each one has its own theme and all add a splash of color to your patio or room. Good thing. Your chrysanthemums never did live very long anyway.
